

---

Contents

---

List of contributors	ix
Acknowledgements	xvi

Introduction	1
Helle Neergaard and Claire M. Leitch

PART I CONSTANT COMPARATIVE TECHNIQUE

An introduction to the constant comparative technique	15
Alistair R. Anderson and Sarah L. Jack

1 Using the constant comparative technique to consider network change and evolution	21
Sarah L. Jack, Alistair R. Anderson, Sarah Drakopoulou Dodd and Susan Moulton

2 Using constant comparison as a method of analysis in entrepreneurship research	52
Susan M. Smith and Edward McKeever

3 Grounded theory analysis in entrepreneurship research	74
Anne Bollingtoft

The future for the constant comparative technique	95
Alistair R. Anderson and Sarah L. Jack

PART II METAPHOR METHODOLOGIES

Metaphor methodologies: exploring entrepreneurship research, pedagogy and researchers	101
Sarah Drakopoulou Dodd and Alice de Koning

4 Enacting, experimenting and exploring metaphor methodologies in entrepreneurship	109
Sarah Drakopoulou Dodd and Alice de Koning

5	Con'text'ualizing images of enterprise: an examination of 'visual metaphors' used to represent entrepreneurship in textbooks	139
	Robert Smith
6	Metaphors in communication of scholarly work	170
	Cecilia Bjursell
	Metaphor methodologies in entrepreneurship research	185
	Sarah Drakopoulou Dodd and Alice de Koning

PART III CRITICAL INCIDENT TECHNIQUE

	The critical incident technique: an overview	191
	Claire M. Leitch
7	Researching the entrepreneurial process using the critical incident technique	199
	Elizabeth Chell
8	The efficacy of the qualitative variant of the critical incident technique (CIT) in entrepreneurship research	224
	Claire M. Leitch and Frances M. Hill
9	A critical incident technique approach to entrepreneurship research using phenomenological explicative data collection	251
	Richard T. Harrison
	Critical incident technique: some conclusions	269
	Claire M. Leitch

PART IV FOCUS GROUPS

	Provenance and use of focus groups	273
	John Watson and Rick Newby
10	Conducting a traditional focus group	281
	John Watson, Rick Newby, Helle Neergaard and Robert Smith
11	Conducting a focus group using group support system (GSS) software	311
	Geoff Soutar, Rick Newby and John Watson

12	Conducting an on-line focus group	339
	Rick Newby and John Watson

	Focus groups: what have we learned?	354
	John Watson and Rick Newby

PART V REPERTORY GRID TECHNIQUE

	Repertory grids in entrepreneurship: practical examples from research	359
	Rita G. Klapper

13	Using repertory grid technique to explore the relationship between business founders and support agents	367
	Anja Hagedorn

14	Using repertory grid to assess intangibles: uncertainty reduction for lean start-ups in entrepreneurship	393
	Enrique Díaz de León and Paul Guild

15	Repertory grid technique: an ideographic and nomothetic approach to knowledge	423
	Carmen Dima

	Concluding thoughts on repertory grids	441
	Rita G. Klapper

	Index	443
--	--------------	-----