

Table of contents

Introduction	5
1. Motives of performing business valuations	9
2. Increasing enterprise value as a main objective of activity	13
3. Motivating managers to achieve increase in value – rewarding short-term ‘success’	21
3.1. Shareholders’ rights and equal treatment of shareholders	24
3.2. The role of various interest groups in corporate governance – the problem of corporate social responsibility	26
3.3. The impact of information on investors’ decisions	29
4. Value Based Management as management concept	39
5. Theoretical basis of valuation	47
6. Property valuation methods	59
6.1. The book value	59
6.2. Liquidation method	68
6.3. Replacement method	69
7. The enterprise goodwill valuation	75
8. Income methods	83
8.1. The problem of determining the forecast period	86
8.2. The discount rate	88
8.3. Valuation based on discounted cash flows (DCF)	99
8.4. The residual value	103
8.5. Adjusted present value	109
8.6. Models based on dividends capitalization	111
8.7. Valuation of bonds	113
9. Comparative (Market) Methods	117
10. Mixed Methods	125
11. Unconventional methods – valuation of options	131
12. Difficulties, misunderstandings, errors and manipulations in the valuations	141
13. The enterprise valuation under conditions of increasing instability	149
Summary	165
Bibliography	169