

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION	11
CHAPTER I
APPROACHES TO VALUES BY VARIOUS COGNITIVE PERSPECTIVES	17
Introduction. The nature of values	17
Subjectivity and objectivity of values	19
Value in various philosophical approaches	28
Thinking about values	43
Conclusion. An economist's reflection	46
CHAPTER II
TOWARDS ECONOMICS OF VALUES
AND A NEW ECONOMIC THEORY OF VALUE	49
Introduction. The need for ethical reflection	49
Profit and loss accounting and resource accounting	52
Productivity and efficiency	56
The macrosocial framework of the economic game	57
The economic imaginary, the role of economic discourse	60
Economic activity and quality of life	61
Anthropological foundations of neoclassical economics	63
Value and valuation in economics	66
Market instrumentalization of values	69
Conclusion. The need for a new economic theory of value	72
CHAPTER III
NORMS, INSTITUTIONS, SOCIAL ORDER	77
Introduction. The nature of norms	77
The role of institutions	79
Institutional order as a component of the social system	82

Normative foundations of the social order	87
Conclusion. Functionality and evolution of social orders	91
CHAPTER IV
SUBJECTIVITY	95
Introduction. Subjectivity and the axionormative order	95
The problem of individualism and communality	96
Subjectivity and responsibility	100
Typology of social actors	102
Subjectivity and the social space of cognition	108
Subjectivity and cultural identity	111
Subjectivity and the complexity of social reality	113
Conclusion. Subjectivity and social becoming	116
CHAPTER V
MODALITY AND SOCIAL CHANGE	119
Introduction. Three ways of perceiving social reality	119
Modality, knowledge, and social change	121
Generating and objectivizing social knowledge	128
Modality and conflict of values	133
The problem of modality	137
Conclusion. The functions of modal thinking	142
CHAPTER VI
SOCIAL SPACE-TIME	145
Introduction. Social becoming	145
Time and social becoming	146
Space as a dimension of human activity	150
Closed and open social space-time	153
The problem of social space-time	155
The social space-time of economic activity	159
Shaping social space-time - exemplified by farming	162
Conclusion. Understanding economic circulation	165
CHAPTER VII
THE DOMINANCE OF THE OPPORTUNISTIC AND TRANSACTIONAL MARKET GAME	169
Introduction. What we can learn from the example of Goldman Sachs	169
Shortsightedness as a distinguishing feature of the modern economy	171
Financial managerialism and the concept of the company	174
Opportunism as the character of the market game	178
In the clutches of marketing	182
Risks associated with the digital economy	187
Conclusion. From transactionality to relationality	194

CHAPTER VIII

FIRMS-IDEAS - A NEW APPROACH TO VALUE IN BUSINESS	199
Introduction. The concept of shared value	199
The concept of the Firm-Idea	202
Other approaches to value in business and the concept of the Firm-Idea	210
Does the future belong to Firms-Ideas?	216
The Firm-Idea - a way out of the opportunistic game	218
Conclusion. The Firm-Idea: towards a relational market economy	221

CHAPTER IX

TRANSITION FROM AN OPPORTUNISTIC TO RELATIONAL MARKET GAME	225
Introduction. Towards a circular economy	225
Islands and archipelagos - the gravitational field of the relational market game	229
Relational financing	236
The system of managerial remuneration	237
Managing intangible assets	239
Relations with stakeholders	242
Innovations and the axionormative order	244
Conclusion. Towards productivity and developmental circularity	247

CHAPTER X

CITIES-IDEAS - A NEW APPROACH TO URBAN DEVELOPMENT	249
Introduction. Cities - a problem and a developmental opportunity	249
The idea of a town	250
Urban economic circulation	254
New urban ideologies and the City-Idea	258
Culture as a mechanism of urban development	263
Social space-time of urban development	265
Urban public space and resident quality of life	268
The right to the city	274
Civic participation and dialogue	278
Towards circularity of urban development	280
Conclusion. Shaping urban space-time	287

CHAPTER XI

UNIVERSITIES-IDEAS	291
Introduction. The idea of the university	291
Intellect and reason	292
Science and the social imaginary	295
Reforming universities	302
University independence	305
Universities and the economy	307
Conclusion. The social space-time of the university's development	308

CHAPTER XII

GOVERNANCE AND ITS CONCEPTUAL FOUNDATIONS	313
Introduction. Governance and social change	313
Dysfunctions and dilemmas of the social system	316
The rules of governance	318
Subjectivity and governance	323
Wicked problems	325
The state and the production sphere	329
Modes of the state's operation	331
The state and politics	334
Conclusion. Governance and politics	336

CHAPTER XIII

THE GLOBAL CRISIS: THE NEED FOR NEW ECONOMIC POLICY	341
Introduction. Axiological foundations of economic policy	341
Three fundamental dimensions of public policy	342
New economic policy	346
New theory of economic goods	352
Conclusion. Social roles, modes of governing, and types of knowledge	356

CHAPTER XIV

CULTURE AS A WAY OUT OF THE CRISIS	357
Introduction. Paralyzed power and culture	357
Civilization and culture	359
Culture and social change	361
Economic and cultural values	364
Development and culture	369
Cultural heritage and development	373
Cultural policy	376
Conclusion. Culture and development	378

AFTERWORD	381
------------------	------------

LIST OF TABLES AND FIGURES	391
-----------------------------------	------------

BIBLIOGRAPHY	393
---------------------	------------

LIST OF NAMES	409
----------------------	------------