

TABLE OF CONTENTS

Preface

How to use this book	11
-----------------------------------	----

Chapter 1

Introduction: Managing in a VUCA world	15
1.1. VUCA	15
1.1.1. Volatility	16
1.1.2. Uncertainty	16
1.1.3. Complexity	16
1.1.4. Ambiguity	17
1.2. The focal points of modern framework of management	17
1.2.1. Diversity	17
1.2.2. Cooperation	18
1.2.3. Innovation	20
1.3. Diversity – Cooperation – Innovation versus the VUCA world ..	21
1.3.1. Diversity versus Cooperation and Innovation	21
1.3.2. Cooperation versus Diversity and Innovation	22
1.3.3. Innovation versus Diversity and Cooperation	22
1.3.4. Diversity and Cooperation protect against Volatility and Uncertainty	23
1.3.5. Innovation protects against Complexity and Ambiguity	23
1.4. The elusive innovativeness	24
1.5. Academic entrepreneurship	25
1.6. From industry to academia and back: bidirectional inspirations ..	26

PART I

Business models: their diversity and reinvention	29
---	----

Chapter 2

Business models as objects of reinvention	31
2.1. Business model as a framework	31
2.2. Simplify, but first build conceptual bridges	33

2.3.	Procedures of reinventing	35
2.4.	Reinvention in spite of trade-offs	35
2.5.	Reinvention of business models of the cluster and within the cluster.....	37
2.6.	The essential interplay of R&D and HR.....	38
2.7.	A good business model should make an organization antifragile .	39

Chapter 3

Within-firm functional diversity of co-existing business models:

there is a model for every team role and for every employee.....	41
3.1. Introduction.....	41
3.2. Detecting qualitative within-firm variation in business model perceptions.....	42
3.3. Quantifying business model perceptions among team roles	43
3.4. Quantifying niche-breadth in business model perceptions	45
3.5. Quantifying similarity among team roles in business model perceptions	47
3.6. Quantifying intra-firm diversity in business model perceptions: a team-role perspective	49
3.7. Quantifying similarity among business model components from team-role perceptions	50
3.8. Conclusions.....	52

Chapter 4

Reinventing business models with TRIZ-based engineering

heuristics	55
4.1. Introduction.....	55
4.1.1. Reinvention of the BM	55
4.1.2. The methodology of TRIZ	56
4.1.3. TRIZ and management.....	57
4.2. Inventive principles of TRIZ as applied to the reinvention of business model components	58
4.3. Conclusions.....	60
4.3.1. Sociology of academic knowledge and TRIZ	60
4.3.2. The universality of TRIZ.....	60
4.4. Appendix: 40 inventive principles of TRIZ as applied to the reinvention of business model components	61

PART II

Cooperation: its logic and consequences	77
--	----

Chapter 5

Cooperation among selfish players: the role of reciprocity	79
5.1. Introduction.	79
5.2. Axelrod's theory and the Prisoner's Dilemma	82
5.3. The payoff matrix.	83
5.4. Repeated Prisoner's Dilemma	84
5.5. Difficult beginnings.	86
5.6. Selected strategies considered from the perspective of cooperativeness	88
5.7. How do the strategies play against each other? What if the shadow of the future is finite and errors happen? . . .	90
5.8. Conclusions.	92

Chapter 6

Cooperating and managing trust	95
6.1. The shadow of the future	95
6.2. How to play the cooperative game.	98
6.3. How to practice trust management	100
6.3.1. Building conditions for cognitive trust	100
6.3.2. Communication.	105
6.3.3. Building conditions for affective trust	107
6.4. About individualities	111
6.5. Developing indicators of a leader's trustworthiness	112
6.6. Conclusions.	114

Chapter 7

Evolutionarily stable strategies and their relevance for innovation . . .	117
7.1. Introduction.	117
7.2. The Hawk-Dove game: defining the evolutionarily stable strategy ..	118
7.3. ESS for three strategies, with an added asymmetry	120
7.4. Determining the evolutionarily stable strategy for innovativeness	123
7.5. The frequency-dependent benefits from innovation and the Braess's paradox.	125

Chapter 8

Cooperative games within the Triple Helix:

research – government – business	129
8.1. Introduction.	129
8.2. The scale of analysis.	130
8.2.1. National level.	130
8.2.2. Regional level.	131
8.2.3. Industry sector.	131
8.2.4. Internal level	132
8.3. Does cooperation improve innovativeness?	133
8.4. The Triple Helix of research, government, and business	134
8.5. Local government as a broker	136
8.6. Science: quality and reliability of researchers or research labs . . .	138
8.7. Business: quality and reliability of companies	139
8.8. Building an incentive system by modifying the payoff matrix . . .	141
8.9. Cooperation among business organizations.	142
8.10. Conclusions	144

PART III

Innovativeness: its requirements and methods	147
---	-----

Chapter 9

Creating environment conducive to innovativeness: implementing the fundamental features

the fundamental features	149
9.1. Introduction.	149
9.2. The characteristics of the environment conducive to innovativeness (ECTI)	150
9.2.1. Stress-free and peer-pressure-free	150
9.2.2. Hierarchy-free	151
9.2.3. Routine-free, suspenseful and fun	151
9.2.4. Stimulating and responsive	152
9.2.5. Orderly	152
9.2.6. Interdisciplinary.	153
9.2.7. Organic	154
9.3. Appendix: The case “ECTI in action: a reinvention of the shopping cart at IDEO”	154

Chapter 10

Methods of stimulating creativity: an overview and an extended example..... 161

10.1. Introduction..... 161

10.2. Creativity as an art of defining and re-defining a problem:
“scampering” with universal stimulating questions..... 162

10.3. Appendix: An extended list of SCAMPER questions, with examples 164

Chapter 11

An “idea” is a gender-symmetric concept: a neglected dimension of creative thinking methods..... 179

11.1. Introduction..... 179

11.2. How to prove that we are not necessarily in control of our own views? 180

11.3. Gender-symmetric creativity..... 182

11.4. The nominal group method: autonomy and anonymity remove bias 183

11.5. Impersonation (Change Ego)—seeing the product through somebody else’s eyes..... 184

11.6. Imaginization..... 185

11.7. Are gender differences important in teaching and managing creativity? 188

11.8. Conclusions..... 189

11.9. Appendix: A largely gender-neutral and social status-neutral list of characters for use in the Impersonation method 189

Bibliography..... 193